

From: Jim Williams, Public Policy Polling
To: Interested Parties
Subject: Stratton Remains Ahead of Krishnamoorthi in Democratic Primary for U.S. Senate
Date: March 10, 2026

With just one week to go, PPP's latest poll among Democratic primary voters in Illinois finds that Lieutenant Governor Juliana Stratton remains in the lead in the race for U.S. Senate. She's the choice of 32% of respondents, followed by Congressman Raja Krishnamoorthi at 30% and Congresswoman Robin Kelly at 13%.

Since late February, Krishnamoorthi's support has dropped 4 points from 34% to 30% while Stratton has gained five points, from 27% to 32% - a nine-point swing in the last two weeks.

Stratton has improved her favorability rating, which now stands at 46%-16%, up from 40%-16% last week.

The 25% of the electorate who remain undecided are disproportionately:

- Men, where Stratton leads 32%-27% over Krishnamoorthi
- Black voters, where Stratton leads 34%-23% over Krishnamoorthi
- Voters in the suburbs outside of Cook County, where Stratton leads 39%-26% over Krishnamoorthi.

Public Policy Polling surveyed 700 likely Democratic primary voters from March 9-10, 2026. The margin of error is +/- 3.7%. 63% of the interviews for the survey were conducted by text message and 37% by telephone.

